

Open-Ended Questions

1. What time did Cato leave his apartment?
2. Why was Cato puzzled about how the South Side had been producing energy at a quicker rate than the North Side?
3. Cato was twitchy all afternoon and early evening. And even though he spent most of his time in his bedroom, his edginess made Aunt June even twitchier.

What does the author mean by saying that Cato and Aunt June were twitchy?

4. "This is my stop," said Cato, jumping off before the driver could say anything else. He waited until the red tail lights of the bus had disappeared and then crossed the road.
Why do you think that Cato waited until the red tail lights of the bus had disappeared before he crossed the road?
5. Why do you think that Cato was told not to go anywhere in the South Side except the Energy Centre?